Program

PART FIRST

I

Invitation to the Dance Max Oesten

THE MORNING CHORAL CLUB

Come, where lights are gleaming;
Come, to joy give place.
See, delight is beaming—
There from every face.

Shouts thro' the air are ringing,
All are dancing, gaily singing:
Dull care behind us flinging,
Let us join the gladsome throng.

And yonder, oh, behold one whose eye doth fondly greet,
Who grasps with ardent pleasure your hand where'er you meet,
And your heart throbs thereat
And it goes pit-a-pat,
Meanwhile mischief is nigh,
Cupid, smiling, doth spy,
Takes aim, and pierces your breast,
And no more we know rest.

(b) Little Papoose on the Wind-swung Bough

Charles Wakefield Cadman

THE MORNING CHORAL CLUB

(a) Wind of evening, softly blowing,
Far away o'er vale and hill,
Take a message to my lover,
Tell him I love him still.

Flow'rets sleeping, breathe your perfume,
On the evening air,
Birdling, sing your sweetest measure,
Waft it, breezes, everywhere.

(b) Little papoose on the wind-swung bough
All the day long where the breezes play,
'Way out west coyotees howl,
Tell me, tell me, are you never afraid?

Little papoose, the green corn sings
The prettiest lullaby ever made;
Still how can you sleep tied up in a tree,
Tell me, tell me, are you never afraid?

THE MORNING CHORAL CLUB

There's a rosy light in the heavenly height,
Where the stars their vigils keep;
There a murmur of sound 'midst the shades profound,
That hover above the deep:
And the first bright ray of the coming day,
Brings woe to the failing night;
While the pale moon dies, and the fierce wind sighs:
Sighs the dirge of another night.

Come we from caverns dim,
To sing our morning hymn,
While over the dancing waves,
Through all the hollow caves,
Echoes the music sweet,
As the new morn we greet,
Hail! glorious day, hail!

Where is Lygeia? Our fair sister,
Safe hidden in some lonely place,
Mourns she the fate that holds her
In hateful bondage to our race?
Oh, see, she comes with lagging pace,
With drooping head and saddened face,
She comes, she comes.

O sun, O sun, thou ruler of the day,
Keeping majestic watch above;
I know not when thy mighty ray
Will see the death of love,
Oh! cruel, cruel fate that binds me!
Alas! alas! and woe is me.
In death alone may I possess thee,
Enfold thee in these arms of mine;
And kiss the eyes too dim to see me,
While bitter tears shall seal thee mine.

Hark! dost hear a sound approaching,
Swiftly coming from the land?
E'en as she mourns, too late,
Her lover comes across the sands;
He hastens to his fate.

The proud sun is beaming,
The bright waves are gleaming,
And o'er the blue deep
The breeze whispers sweet;
Come, love, from thy dreaming,
My heart waits for thee,
The light winds are bringing,
The sounds of sweet singing,
I know thou art here,
My soul feels thee near;
Where art thou lingering?
My soul feels thee near,
My heart waits for thee.

Ah! 'tis but a dream of mine,
A dream I may not own.

I care not, for one glance repays
Long years, long years of suffering days.

Oh, go! Oh, go! 'tis death to stay,
'Tis fondest love that asks thee,
'Tis but a dream,
Then for the love of me, you choose to die,
And 'neath the restless sea for ever lie.
Then must thou say farewell
To the bright sky,
Ne'er shall the sun dispel for thee a sigh,
Alas! for thou must say farewell.
Farewell to summer's bloom,
Farewell to winter's gloom;
Ne'er o'er the blossoming dell see springtide blow,
Ne'er watch the roses glow, nor see the springtide blow;
What then a love like mine,
E'en though it be divine;
Still dost thou choose to die?

I care not, be it life or death;
Beloved, I come to thee!

As the slow currents creep,
And the wild billows leap,
Down through the deep
Sinks he to sleep,
Where light and dark are one,
Where never comes the sun.
There 'neath the restless wave,
Share thou the sailor's grave,
While the low murmurs sweet
Lull thee to slumber deep,
Down through the deep, sinks he to sleep.

Beloved, rest thou from earth's alarms,
Safe in the ocean's circling arms;
Ever above thee shall flow my tears,
Loving and mourning thee through the sad years.
As the slow currents creep, down through the deep
Sinks he to sleep, to sleep.

Intermission

PART SECOND

I

Summer Night Reinhold L. Herman

THE MORNING CHORAL CLUB

With widespread arms approaching comes softly night
And to her heart she foldeth all blossoms bright.
Her veil hides lea and mountain, with stars a gleam.
She lulls with drowsy bell-tone the world to dream.

Forgotten now day's toiling, hushed sorrow's cry;
I lift mine eyes adoring to heaven on high.
A tiny bird sings floating in rosy height,
Might he my soul but carry up in his flight.

*SERENADE FROM SHAKESPEARE'S "CYMBELINE"

(Act II, Scene III.)

Hark! hark! the lark at Heaven's Gate sings,
And Phoebus 'gins to rise,
His steed to water at those springs
On chalic'd flowers that lies;
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes:
With every thing that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise;
Arise, arise!

THE ERL-KING

(Translated from Goethe's Poem.)

Who rides by night in the tempest wild?
It is the fond father with his child;
He holdeth the boy safe in his arm,
He clasps him firmly, he keeps him warm.

"Why hidest thou, child, thy face with fear?"
"Seest thou not, father, the Erl-King near?—
The Erl-King, with his crown and train?"
"My son, the fog hangs o'er the plain."

"Thou sweet, dear child, come, go with me!
Such pretty games will I play with thee;
The banks in sweet flowers are gayly drest,
My mother has many a golden vest."—

"My father, my father, and dost thou not hear
What the Erl-King is whispering in my ear?"
"Fear nothing, fear nothing, my darling boy;
The winds with the withering branches toy."

"O wilt thou, fair boy, go along with me?
My daughters shall prettily wait upon thee;
In the maze of the midnight dance they sweep,
They rock thee, and dance thee, and sing thee to sleep."—

"Dear father, dear father, and seest thou not
The Erl-King's daughters in yon dark spot?"
"My son, my son, as were it by day,
I see the old willow-trees glimmer so gray."

"I love thee, with rapture thy form I survey;
And if thou'rt not willing, I'll tear thee away."—
"Oh, father, oh, father, he's seizing my arm!
Oh, save me—the Erl-King has wrought me harm!"

The father rides swiftly in fear and alarm,
He held the sobbing child in his arm,
He reaches the court with trouble and dread:
Alas! in his arms the child was dead.

Italian Serenade Frederick Stevenson

MR. WALTER GREENE

THE MORNING CHORAL CLUB

Sleep, darling, sleep,
Thy lover lingers near,
Stars paler grow,
Too soon the day will break:

Sleep, darling, sleep,
Love wakes alone,
Sleep, and dream of him
Who watches for thy dear sake,
Ah, love, my love, thy dreams foretell,
I come to say farewell.

Wake, darling, wake,
At day break we must part,
Come, my own, with the dawning.
Awake, awake, dear heart,
One last farewell, one last goodbye,
Thou art my love, my heart's desire,
A crimson flush tints the eastern sky.

Come, darling, come,
Thy lover waits thee here.
Stars paler grow, too soon the day will break,
One last good-bye, one kiss, Farewell sweetheart.
