Musical Notes.

It is gratifying to encounter the familiar name of an acquaintance and fellow-townsmen in such pleasant connection as the following: Mr. Clarence Eddy, the noted Chicago organist, who is at present on a visit in Paris, writes to a musical exchange: "Ten days ago Mr. McMaster gave an organ recital in Christ Church, Neuilly, just outside the city limits, and I attended in company with two of Guilmant's organ pupils, Mr. C. H. Galloway of St. Louis and Mr. D. E. Crozier of Harrisburg. Both are working very hard and have received special marks of favor from their teacher."

Mr. Charles Galloway, who is widely and favorably known in St. Louis as a young organist of unusual talent, went abroad about a year ago to prosecute his studies under Guilmant, the great French master. Mr. Galloway's many friends will be glad to hear of his good fortune.
