
CHARLES GALLOWAY, EMINENT ORGANIST

ST. LOUIS MAN WILL PLAY IN THE
TEMPLE OF MUSIC THIS AFTERNOON.

There arrived from St. Louis last Friday Charles Galloway, the greatest organist of the West, so he is pronounced by eminent critics. He played Sunday afternoon and will play again this afternoon in the Temple of Music.

He has recently returned from four years spent in Paris with the great Alexander Guilmant. Mr. Galloway was a soloist at the world renowned Trocadero during the Paris Exposition, and the Paris papers enthused over him in a manner characteristically Latin. He is quite a young man, but Sousa, who heard him, prophesies a great future for him.
