The organists of last week were Mr. Charles Galloway of St. Louis, Mr. Tyler of Brooklyn, Mr. Schwartz of Philadelphia and Mr. B. J. Lang of Boston.

Mr. Galloway gave the three first recitals of the week and gave them in a manner to justify enthusiastic admiration of his work. His programmes were well arranged and selected, and his playing showed exceptional skill, musical taste, a well-balanced judgment, and a self-control and repose that were most admirable. Mr. Galloway possesses an unusual amount of talent. He made many friends while here and his organ playing won hosts of admirers.

Mr. Tyler's programmes were rather too long, but he showed a commendable appreciation of appropriate organ music.
